In the Primary Election

Hometown Candidate Weidenfeld Expected to Bring Out Big Vote

by Elaine Skolnik

Hometown candidate, former Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, is expected to bring out a big vote here on primary day, Tuesday, September 13. Weidenfeld seeks the Democratic nomination for the county council seat in District 4. Facing rivals who are Bowie residents, Weidenfeld hopes to win big here to enhance his chances of victory. Greenbelters account for roughly 23% of the Democratic voters in District 4 where the Democratic eligible voters number 24,109 and the Republicans 13,388 (see separate story).

Voting in the September primaries is by party registration with voters not allowed to cross party lines. Voters not affiliated with either the Democratic or Republican party will have to wait until November 8 to cast their ballots.

By far the most heated contest is the county executive race on the Democratic side where attorney Wayne Curry, County Councilmember Sue Mills and State Senator Bea Tignor are in a tight race. Civic activist Artie Polk is also running. (See separate story on the County Executive race).

Republican Robert B. Ostrom, former county attorney, has no opposition.

In Prince Georges County there are 217,075 registered Democrats and 57,968 registered Republicans.

The contest for governor, in which County Executive Parris Glendening is the front-runner, has also captured the attention of Prince Georgians. Joining him as the lieutenant governor candidate is Kathleen K. Townsend.

Greenbelters will also help elect candidates for contests for U. S. Senate and Congress and state and county offices which will be decided in the November general election. To provide information to Greenbelt voters about candidates who will appear on the primary election ballot on September 8, the following is a "walk-through" of the roster of Democratic and Republican candidates.

U. S. Senate

Incumbent Paul S. Sarbanes, Democrat, is expected to win his party's nomination for U. S. Senate. Sarbanes served in the House of Representatives from 1970 to 1976 and in the Senate from 1976 to the present. Others seeking the nomination are Dennard A. Gayle, Sr., John B. Liston and Leonard E. Trout, Jr.

On the Republican side, former U.S. senator from Tennessee and former Secretary of Labor William Brock of Anne Arundel County, is considered the candidate to beat. Moving up closer to him in the polls is major challenger Ruthann Aron, a developer, an attorney and a commissioner for the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Maryland House of Delegates member Ronald Franks, a practicing dentist, is also on the ballot. Others running are Howard D. Greyber, Dr. Culver Sprogle Iadd, Jr., perennial candidate Ross C. Pierpont and John C. Webb, Jr.

The latest State of Maryland registration figures show 1,426,033 Democrats and 677,406 Republicans are registered. Democrats are gaining more strength in the Washington suburbs while suburban Baltimore has added more Republicans.

County Council Race

Weidenfeld, Robinson Fight For Democratic Nomination

by James Giese

In the contest for the Fourth County Councilmanic District, the main issue seems to be the continued battle between Bowie and Greenbelt for control of the seat. Greenbelt won the seat 12 years ago when the Bowie vote split, allowing then Greenbelt Mayor Richard Castaldi to win the district with a coalition of Greenbelt and unincorporated area votes. Castaldi successfully defended his seat in the next two elections, even though Bowie claims some 50 percent of the district's registered voters. This year, Greenbelt resident and former Mayor Gil Weidenfeld, recently retired from the U.S. Patent Office, is hoping to keep together the coalition of votes Castaldi put together to win the chance to appear on the ballot in November.

He will face G. Frederick Robinson in the Democratic primary. Robinson, a former Bowie city Councilmember and retired major in the county police department, lost to Castaldi four years ago. Another Bowie resident, Robert Callahan, former president of the Prince Georges County Civic Federation, civic activist, and a certified public accountant, is not considered a contender but is expected to draw votes from throughout the district. Weidenfeld has been endorsed by the senator and delegates from the overlapping 23rd Legislative District. Senator Leo Green and Delegates Mary Conroy, James Hubbard and Joan Pitkin all live in the Bowie area and are seeking reelection to their own offices.

There is only one candidate on the Republican ballot for the Fourth Councilmanic District, Audrey Scott, the popular former Mayor of Bowie. She is expected to put up a good fight against whomever might win the democratic nomination. (Because she is the only candidate in her party, Scott's views on issues will not be reported at this time, but will be reported before the general election.)

The election campaign has been fairly quiet in Greenbelt. Weidenfeld, pg. 17, c 3

U.S. Congress

In the 5th Congressional District contest, the incumbent Steny H. Hoyer, Democrat, should have little trouble winning the nomination over his little known opponents Harold Glynn Dial of Charles County, Ricardo V. Johnson and Lawrence Keval of Prince Georges County. Former president of the Maryland State Senate, Hoyer has served in the House of Representatives since 1981.

Republicans vying to be their party's nominee in November are Donald Devine and Harold R. Monoz both of Anne Arundel County and John E. Smathers of Prince Georges County

Mary Linstrom: Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen for 1994

by Sandra Lange

Mary Linstrom is Greenbelt's 1994 Outstanding Citizen. Selected by a nominating committee of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, Mary was honored on the Festival stage Friday night, Sept. 2.

A resident of Greenbelt for 45 years, Mary and her late husband Jack raised nine children in a three-bedroom GHI home. However, it is not for this accomplishment that she was named Greenbelt's 22nd Outstanding Citizen. Rather, as Joe Timer of the nominating committee proclaimed, "... for (her) many acts of charity and kindness, for helping others in time of need, for being a good neighbor ... and for countless small deeds which are unpublishable, but not unappreciated."

Mary has distinguished herself as a community volunteer in several organizations. She is one of the founding members of the Greenbelt Museum Committee, originally established in 1985 as part of the city's 50th Anniversary Committee. As co-chair of the committee with Christina O'Boyle, she worked on purchasing a GHI house to become the Museum, establishing goals, assembling the collection, and keeping the Museum open every Sunday. She is a charter member of the non-profit Friends of the Greenbelt Museum, a former See MARY LINSTROM, page 14

Differences among County Executive Candidates

by James Giese

Although there has been much political talk among the Democratic party candidates for county executive, it has been hard to distinguish differences between them on election issues. Crime, education and economic development are of greatest concern to the voters according to the polls and the candidates have generally expressed their desire to reduce crime, improve education and promote economic development and create jobs, particularly inside the beltway.

Four Democrats seek to replace Parris Glendening as the next County Executive—Wayne Curry, Sue Mills, Artie Polk and Bea Tignor. The primary winner will face Republican Robert Ostrom in the November general election. Besides the voter concerns, the candidates have raised as issue experience and political connections.

Experience

Sue Mills is the only candidate to hold an elective county office. She has served on the county council for 16 years and, before that, on the school board for eight years. However, she is considered a political maverick and agrees with that assessment. She holds the record for being the councilmember to most frequently cast the only negative vote against adopted legislation. Curry has criticized Mills for those negative votes in a campaign flyer that Mills has called distorted and a "hate sheet."

Neither Curry nor Polk have held an elective office. Curry has been active in county affairs as chair of the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce and as a development attorney. He also served as a Special Assistant to Winfield Kelly when he was county executive. Tignor who has been a school teacher in the county and a professor at Prince Georges Community College, narrowly won the democratic primary election, but easily won the general election for the House of Delegates in 1990. In 1992, she was appointed to the State Senate when Albert Wynn was elected to Congress. She was Wynn's campaign manager.

Political Connections

There has been a strong political rivalry between State Senator Thomas V. Mike Miller and County Executive Parris Glendening. See COUNTY EXEC., page 13

VOTING

Where and When

Primary election day is Tuesday, September 13. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the four precincts which serve Greenbelt - St. Hugh's School (third precinct), the new Greenbelt Elementary School (sixth precinct), Springhill Lake Elementary School (8th precinct) and Eleanor Roosevelt High School (thirteenth precinct).

Only registered Democrats and Republicans may vote in the primary. In Greenbelt there are 5,541 Democrats and 1,852 Republicans registered. Those who decline party affiliation will not vote in next week's primary as there are no non-partisan races.

Any registered voter who has doubts about where to vote may obtain additional information by calling the Election Office at 952-3270.

Gil Weidenfeld's Experience Needed

In the interests of both Greenbelt and the entire fourth Councilmanic District, we endorse Gil Weidenfeld in the Democratic Primary for County Council. At a time when most of the elective offices in the county will be held by newcomers, Weidenfeld's leadership and experience will be crucial.

Of all the candidates running for council seats throughout the county, Weidenfeld has the most experience and the greatest vision to deal with the myriad problems and issues confronting our rapidly changing county. Besides his long experience as Greenbelt's mayor, he has also been a leader in county, state and regional organizations. His election as Chair of the Council of Governments showed the esteem in which he is held by other metropolitan officials.

As Mayor, Weidenfeld faced many of the issues that are now facing the county as a whole—including the need to balance the demand for a stronger tax base against the road congestion and other problems that development can bring.

Greenbelters should support Weidenfeld for selfish reasons as well. We share election districts with Bowie and other areas of the county for both county council and the state legislature. All three members of the House of Delegates, plus our state Senator are from Bowie and are favored for reelection. It seems only fair that at least one of the five elective positions representing Greenbelt be held by a Greenbelt resident.

Greenbelters account for just 23 percent of the Democratic voters in the councilmanic district. Strong support by Greenbelters is essential to the election of a Greenbelt candidate. We feel Weidenfeld's actions during his years of service to this city show he has the potential to be a forceful and effective member of the county council.

Please Vote

Tuesday, September 13 is primary day for both Democrats and Republicans. Among the offices at stake this year are governor, county executive, states attorney and the city's representatives on the county council and in the state legislature. Regardless of party or viewpoint, we urge all registered voters to cast their ballots in the primary election and urge those residents eligible to vote who are not yet registered to call the election board for information on how they can register before the general election in November. Thanks to the term limits enacted at the last general election, an unprecedented number of elective positions will be held by newcomers after this election. It is especially important this year that all citizens take an active and informed part in the election process.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The News Review welcomes letters to the editor. They should be submitted by 9 p.m. Tuesday, be signed in handwriting (with the name also printed or typed) and bear the writer's address and phone number. If possible, letters should be typed double-spaced on one side of the paper. All letters are subject to editing for reasons of space, libel, taste, and clarity.

Disappointed

A few weeks ago, I watched the most recent City Council meeting on television because I have a particular interest in seeing Greenbelt take the initiative for the entire state of Maryland to establish a fenced enclosure where dog owners can let their pets exercise off leash and become better pets through socialization with other dogs. It also would give Greenbelt residents with something in common an opportunity to meet and socialize as well.

I was disappointed in the Mayor's response to the petition submitted for consideration that night. She seemed consumed with the idea that the spread of disease was a major concern and feebly attempted to draw some correlation between a dog park and the spread of polio through the use of swimming pools in the 1950s. She further dismissed a microbiologist who works for the Department of Agriculture who has conducted studies on animal diseases, particularly in dogs, for years and concluded this was a non-issue.

I am a participant in the Prince Georges County Pets on Wheels program and take my dogs weekly to visit the elderly at the Greenbelt Nursing Center. The patients there are especially susceptible to viruses and illnesses of all kinds. I should think that if exposure to animals was a major threat in the spread of disease that the County would not sponsor such a program.

As disappointed as I was after viewing the City Council meeting, I was most encouraged by the number of Greenbelt residents who attended a meeting at the library this week in support of a dog park. Dog parks in Oregon, California, Texas, New York, and elsewhere have successfully existed for many years. I hope the residents of Greenbelt, whether they are pet owners or not, will support this much-needed park.

News Review

Doesn't Get It

The News Review still doesn't get it. Nearly a year after the 1993 Special Meeting on monthly fees, it still castigates what it sees as "87 disgruntled members" who had petitioned for the meeting. The News Review, as well as some GHI authorities, still prefer to blame members for taking an active role in their cooperative. Where the paper sees disgruntled members, most of us see a large group who protected the community's and their own interest.

The News Review seems to have forgotten that the vote to freeze fees was overwhelming despite the parliamentary antics and legal maneuvering that was much in evidence at the meeting. Even more, the recent elections reinforced the memberships' new approach as those candidates associated with reform and accountability swept into office, while incumbents were uniformly voted out.

SOMEBODY GOOJED

A long time resident has pointed out an omission in last week's story on Women of Achievement in Prince Georges County. Greenbelt's and Prince Georges County's first woman elected to a municipal council was Ruth Taylor. She was elected to the Greenbelt town council in 1938 for a one year term and was reelected the following year for a two year term. Not only was she missed by the researchers for the book, but she was missed by our reporter. We regret the omission.

It is time for the entire community to realize that GHI has undergone a major transformation and will not return to its old way of cronyism, unaccountability, and blaming members. We are now on an irreversible path toward fiscal responsibility, service, openness, and accountability.

The News Review can label us "disgruntled" if it wishes; in fact, we represent the democratic majority of GHI.

Reception at Gallery

The public is invited to the opening reception of a photography exhibit by Alex Jones which will be held at the Gallery on Saturday, September 10 from 3-5 p.m. The Gallery, part of the Prince Georges County Library system, is located in the Greenbelt Library.

The exhibit "Nothing to Dread" reveals the power and beauty of the natural hairstyle known as Dreadlocks. The show will be on display through September 30.

Painters, sculptors and other visual artists in Prince Georges County are invited to contact Natalie Weikart at 262-7000 about booking a show at The Gallery.

Fun at Goddard

The Goddard Space Flight Center Visitor Center will be showing the video "Supernova" on Saturday, September 10, at 1 p.m. This ten minute video uses computer graphics, photographic images, and interviews with scientist to investigate the most spectacular event in the life of a star. In a supernova, the entire star explodes, blasting most of its stellar material into space.

The Visitor Center is at the Soil Conservation Road entrance. Call 286-8981 for information.

Babysitters

Available

Greenbelt Cares has a list of students who are interested in being babysitters or mother's helpers. All of these students have completed Greenbelt CARES' babysitting course, and understand the responsibilities and safety issues of taking care of children. Call 345-6660 for additional information and referrals.

Service Exchange Workshop Set

The city's Senior Citizen Advisory Committee will hold a second Time Dollar/Service Exchange Workshop on Saturday, September 17 from 10 a.m. to noon at the Aquatic and Fitness Center.

The first meeting, attended by 30 individuals and leaders of civic, social, and religious organizations, was held in early June to explore the basic concept. Now a committee is needed to draft a pilot design suited to Greenbelt's specific needs.

Essentially, this arrangement would provide residents an opportunity to help themselves while helping their neighbors. Volunteers offer simple services such as yard work, shopping, letter writing, etc. A "time dollar" of one hour is earned for each hour of effort. These credits can be used in exchange for services, banked for future use, or donated to others.

A city-wide registration would allow many matches to be made. Groups presently providing informal assistance could compound their good works by enlarging the pool to serve the entire city. Interested parties should contact Karen Hasely at the Youth Center at 474-6878, or call Pat Unger at 474-1052 for transportation.

Donation Drop-off

Residents are encouraged to bring used clothing, shoes/socks, towels, old bedding, and small household or kitchen items to the "donation drop-off" on Saturday, September 10 from 9 a.m.-Noon behind City Hall. Items should be clean and in good condition. Donations are tax-deductible and receipts are available upon request. For more information or to arrange a pick-up of large items (mattresses, furniture, etc.), call ARW at 336-6200. Donations will make a difference for many County residents.

Golden Age Club

by Dolores Capotosto

The Golden Age Club meeting of Sept. 14 will be the birthday celebration for the month. Our Sunshine Committee chairpersons, Margaret Graham and her sister, Hilda Orleans do a marvelous job of remembering birthdays, especially for the older members who can no longer attend meetings. They also send cards to those who are ill. We wish a speedy recovery to Hilda, who has been hospitalized lately.

We had a spontaneous and creative session at our last meeting's program time—"Helpful Hints for Seniors," and Pearl Siegel reminded us of several excellent resources, one being our that lemon juice and salt will remove rust from almost anything??!

The trip to Baltimore will be on Sept. 20, and there is a trip planned for Oct. 20. See Jim Maher if you want to sign up for trips, or call him at 513-5869. There will be a video tape on a trip to Australia at one of our upcoming meetings. Come out and join in the activities.

All members and prospective members are invited to attend.

FOGM Board Selects Grad Student as First Curator

by Sandra Lange

The Friends of the Greenbelt Museum (FOGM) board selected Ann Denkler, a graduate student at the University of Maryland, as their museum's first part-time curator. She will work one day a week. As a volunteer for the past year, Denkler has been cataloging the furniture, household items, clothing and print materials donated to FOGM since the Museum opened in 1987. Her new duties will expand to include research, and activities related to the documentation and preservation of the collection.

FOGM board members and volunteers have worked hard over the years to establish the curator's position through numerous flea markets and other fundraising activities. One of the principal goals in forming the Greenbelt Museum has been to increase the professional management. It also is one of the criteria in obtaining accreditation by the American Association of Museums.

The FOGM board remains responsible for conducting the Sunday tours with volunteer guides and formulating the policies related to the operation of the Museum. The board also is responsible for the maintenance of the interior of the house.

Flag Needed

For the past several years, a 48-star American flag has flown outside the Museum on Sundays when the house is open for tours. This flag has deteriorated and can no longer be displayed. FOGM is seeking a replacement 48-Star flag anyone who has such a flag and would like to donate it to the Museum, or who knows where one can be obtained, is requested to call Mary Linstrom, 474-7921.

The FOGM board is planning future exhibits which will include a 1930s and 1940s hat display. The Greenbelt Museum is open every Sunday, 1-5 p.m., and is located at 10-B Crescent Road.

Volunteers Needed

The American Heart Association has a number of tasks for interested volunteers concerning the Heartwalk on October 1. Volunteers are needed to recruit teams and walkers anywhere in Prince Georges County, or to assist with registration for the event. For those who prefer behind the scenes, the Association welcomes helpers in the office. Also needed are people to hand out information about healthy hearts at area grocery stores. To volunteer call 779-9444.

Lecture on Sleeping

"Sleep Disorders" will be the topic of a free lecture at Laurel Regional Hospital Thursday, Sept. 22 in the J. Russell Jones Room. Our deepest sympathy to Pat Schreiber and children Katie and Lauren on the untimely death of her husband and their father, Chris.

Greenbelters who saw Greenbelt Arts Centers' plays will be saddened to learn of the death of William "Bill" Fedorshik. Bill died unexpectedly in the evening of Thursday, September 1. Bill had performed in Greenbelt for almost as long as the Arts Center had been producing plays. He most recently appeared as Falstaff in Shakespeare's "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and as Ferovius in Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion."

Another daughter has been added to the family of Jenne and Gary Hibbs of Bowie. Garlyn Catherine, weighing 7 lb., 3 oz., arrived on Aug. 29. Little Garlyn joins her 2½ year-old sister, Anneliese, and her year-old brother, Taylor. This is an exciting time for the grandparents from Goldsboro, NC, Sue and John Bauhofer, and also for Garlyn's grandparents from Greenbelt, Shirley and Ray Hibbs.

R12, T15, 16, 17 Bus Times Changed

Some metro bus schedules changed on Monday, September 6, including the R12, T15/16/17 buses which serve Greenbelt. Some R12 and T16 bus times are very similar to the old times and some travel times have changed quite a bit. Check new bus schedules for the changes. Schedules are available at the Metro stations and libraries.

For example, for morning riders who take the R12 to the Greenbelt Metro station, many runs are five or ten minutes later than they had been. The R12 bus passes the intersection of Mandan and Greenbelt Roads, heading toward the Greenbelt Metro station at 5:52 a.m., 6:12, 6:39, 7:08, 7:38, 8:08, and 8:38. And then passes Crscent Road and Gardenway at 5:40 a.m., 6:20, 6:48, 7:23, 7:54, 8:24, and 8:54.

For Springhill Lake residents taking the R12 to the Greenbelt Metro station the new times the bus passes the intersection of Springhill Drive and Edmonston Road are 5:58 a.m., 6:39, 7:08, 7:28, 7:58, 8:30, and 9:13.

The new T15/16/17 route times have changed in unpredictable fashion - some runs are earlier, some later, and some are the same times they have been running. For example, heading towards the Greenbelt Metro Station the bus passes the intersection of Mandan Road and Hanover Parkway at: 5:26 a.m., 5:56, 6:22, 6:56, 7:30, 8:00, 8:30, and 9:00. The bus then passes Greenbelt Center on its way to the Greenbelt Metro at: 5:31 a.m., 6:01, 6:27, 7:01, 7:36, 8:06, 8:36 and 9:06.

WSSC to Hold Hearings On Capital Improvements

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) will hold two public hearings on its proposed Capital Improvements Program (CIP) for fiscal years 1996 through 2001. As always the Commission encourages interested parties to comment verbally or in writing at either of these hearings. All relevant and timely comments will be considered before final action is taken on the CIP.

The CIP proposals consist of planning, design and construction expenditures for major water and sewer facilities. Examples of such proposals include: a study to evaluate the need for replacement of the Patuxent Water Filtration Plant (Prince Georges County); and construction of a major sewage treatment facility (Montgomery County). The CIP will be transmitted to the county executives and county councils of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties by October 1.

The first public hearing will be on Wednesday September 14 at 7:30 p.m. in Upper Marlboro in the County Administration Building, 2nd floor, Room 2027, 14741 Governor Oden Bowie Drive.

Copies of the preliminary draft CIP are now available at the WSSC Office of Communications, Lobby Level, 14501 Sweetzer Lane, Laurel.

City Council to Discuss Cable TV Bankruptcy & Ownership Transfer

by Elaine Skolnik

The Greenbelt City Council at next Monday's regular meeting will discuss Maryland Cable Corporation's (MCC) bankruptcy and transfer of ownership of its northern Prince Georges County cable system, operated by Multivision. The meeting will take place in the Municipal Building at 8 p.m.

A city council worksession on the issue scheduled for August 22, was postponed because negotiations were edging closer to an agreement among the involved parties — the county, representing unincorporated areas and municipalities and MCC, current owner and Maryland Cable Partners, L.P. the new owners.

In their August 19 memorandum to City Manager Daniel Hobbs, Deputy City Manager Michael McLaughlin and Cable Coordinator Beverly Palau noted that at the group's third meeting on August 17 "a possible resolution was developed." However, in order to work out the details of the agreement, the deadline for approval of the transfer by the County/municipalities was extended to September 22. According to McLaughlin/Palau, "the possible resolution as it stands now" includes the following key concessions from the new owners: (4) "Consideration of the transfer is agreed to be separate (cable franchise) renewal." The county/municipalities had been concerned that since refranchising follows so closely to the transfer process, issues not raised now may not be allowed during the refranchising process and (2) acceptance of all responsibilities regarding non-compliance issues that currently exists with (CO)/Multivision.

In agreeing to the above points McLaughlin/Palau observed, that, if the new owners "do not improve the sys-

In agreeing to the above points McLaughlin/Palau observed that, if the new owners "do not improve the system and address non-compliance issues, those will be strikes against them at the time of renewal. Further, should there be smaller scale, specific non-compliance issues, they agree to accept them and to try to resolve them. The larger non-compliance issues such as the two way communication on the cable system will probably not be resolved prior to renewal." It is expected they will become part of consideration in the renewal process.

Expiration Extended

Franchise expiration dates have been extended by the current and new owners so that the 20 franchise authorities in the northern part of the county will enter the renewal process within about six months of each other. This would allow more time for the renewal negotiations process and ease the administrative burden of the system's new owner.

Other ingredients of the possible resolution include the new owners' (1) paying "all the legal and other fees incurred by the county and municipalities through the bankruptcy and transfer procedures," (2) resolving "some outstanding monetary revenues for public access" which has been consistently denied by Multivision," (3) agreeing "to use up to $3,000,000 in end-of-the-

Update

The county/municipalities have requested that the new owners, Maryland Cable Partners, L.P. agree to provide $10 million for a "guaranteed upgrade liquidity fund"—$2 million cash for upgrades to the system in the short term and a guarantee of an additional $8 million if the franchise is renewed in 1998.

The new owners have also been requested not to pass on to subscribers any costs related to the settlement.

year surplus revenues for capital improvements to the system... essentially a reserve account that will accumulate when revenues exceed expenditures in the operation of the system. Originally the county/municipalities sought a trust fund concept, and (4) agreeing to continue the installation of fiber optics to replace existing coaxial cable, so that the maximum number of amplifiers can be reduced... a capital expenditure separate from the $3,000,000."

The county and municipalities also want assurance that the provisions of the agreement will not impact subscriber rates.

For Crescent Road

Bicycle Lanes OK Expected

by Diane Oberg

At its September 12 regular meeting, the Greenbelt City Council is likely to approve the construction this fall of bicycle lanes on Crescent Road from Lastner Lane to Northway. Council discussed the proposal at an August 22 work-session.

Public Works Director Carl Hirsch said that the existing shoulders can be paved without loss of greenspace, although the road would lose some of its "rural feel." Hirsch and City Manager Daniel Hobbs recommend paving six foot bike lanes on each side of the road. Councilmember Rodney Roberts urged limiting the lanes to five feet. However, Hobbs and Hirsch both urged council to conform to current county standards for bike lanes to reduce the city's liability risk.

Hirsch believes the project can be accomplished for the $55,000 previously budgeted. These funds were allocated for the next fiscal year, however, so Council will have to revise its current year spending plans.

Councilmember Thomas White pressed his colleagues to identify what "wouldn't be done" if the project is moved up. Hobbs said that $40,000 is allocated in the current budget for bike related projects, which could be deferred. There is also an adequate unallocated balance in the capital projects fund. The city's other major capital projects are "just gearing up" and would not be affected by the new project.

Before Winter

Council and Hirsch had some concerns about the city's ability to get the work done before winter. Hobbs expected that the city could award the bid at its first October meeting (October 10 or 11). Hirsch said the contractor could need a couple of weeks to set up before beginning work and no more than two weeks to complete the work. This creates tight deadlines before local asphalt plants close November 15. However, Hobbs and Hirsch were optimistic that the work could be completed this fall.

White was concerned about whether the current drainage systems could accommodate the increased runoff. Hirsch said that city crews would need to "dress up" the roadside swales, but that otherwise there should be no problems. He felt that the under-road drainage pipes had sufficient capacity to handle the runoff.

White continued to raise concerns about the drainage capabilities and whether the city had studied the issue adequately. He argued for a consultant to study the hydraulics of the project more thoroughly. The remaining councilmembers did not share these concerns. They left the decision as to whether to seek outside engineering advice up to the city staff.

The Greenbelt Gardener

by Rosie Rhubarb

Labor Day does not mean the end of the summer season in the garden. Summer annual flowers and vegetables will keep producing till the first frost, though at a reduced rate compared to mid-summer.

The official end of summer is the autumn equinox, which is still weeks away. Some time after that is when the leaves on the trees noticeably change color.

Keep watch on and harvest from your tomato and pepper plants. There's still time to start an autumn vegetable garden by planting lettuce, spinach, carrot, beet, turnip, and radish seeds. Broccoli, brussel spouts and cabbage can be started from plants. Remember that lettuce and leafy greens can take a shadier spot than many vegetables. But they need at least several hours of sun to do their best.

It seems to be a particularly good year for autumn clematis.

Shrubs and trees covered in this white, flowered vine can be seen around the oldest parts of the city. Seldom has it romped with such vigor over surrounding plants. But it is worth growing since it is very hardy and disease resistant in our area.

If grown in a place where it's free to roam without overwhelming other plants, such as along a chain link fence, it can be a good addition to the garden. It can be found in garden centers under the name Clematis maximowicziana. Its small white star shaped flowers give off a delicate scent.

Greenbelt's Manager Helps Craft "Krakow Manifesto" for Romania

by James Giese

"If something comes out of this, it will be the biggest contribution I've made to public administration," Greenbelt City Manager Daniel Hobbs declared in summarizing the surprising accomplishment that took place when he moderated a symposium of Rumanian and American officials at a Conference on Municipal Finance and Budgeting in Krakow, Poland.

The Rumanian delegation had led the discussion from polite, technical questions and answers into a discussion of the need to reform and renegotiate the power and financial relationships between Rumanian municipalities and the central government.

The end result was a political statement to diplomatically and subtly begin a process of reform, according to Hobbs. All eight members of the delegation signed the document, referred to at the conference as the "Krakow Manifesto." The delegates represented the central government, the parliament and local governments. It called for greater municipal autonomy and decentralization of public services and more citizen input into local budgets.

How did Greenbelt's manager wind up moderating a symposium in Krakow? For many years the International City/County Management Association (ICMA) has been helping the United States Agency for International Development (AID) in developing programs and assisting foreign countries in strengthening local governments and training local government officials. As a part of this effort, AID and ICMA have been working with the newly democratized eastern European governments. These two agencies jointly sponsored the Conference on Municipal Budgeting and Finance in Krakow, July 11 to 14.

ICMA sought out managers to participate. Hobbs was one of two managers nominated by the Maryland City/County Management Association. Both he and Susan Robinson, manager of the Town of Chevy Chase, were selected. Only 11 U.S. managers attended the conference. The Greenbelt City Council agreed to pay Hobbs travel expenses.

In total, there were about 80 representatives from six east European countries, Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Slovakia, and from five English-speaking countries, the U.S., England, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. County Administrative Officer Major Riddick was another Maryland manager attending serving in his capacity as a member of the Board of Directors of Public Technology, Inc. (PTI), a nonprofit organization to help local governments in applying to their operations the latest in technology developments. PTI participated in the program presentation on budgeting. Hobbs expected to make a presentation on budgeting. He was to share experiences and expertise with Central and Eastern European counterparts and to strengthen relationships with them. Because of the language barriers, the conference was divided much of the time into groups which each contained the delegation of one Eastern Europe country.

Romania

Hobbs chose Romania because its language is a Romance language and he had learned Latin and was knowledgeable of Spanish and Italian. While he did not know Rumanian, there were sufficient similarities to the languages he knew that he was able to get a general idea of what was being said before it was translated.

Instead of doing a presentation, Hobbs was selected to moderate the panel. The Rumanians had a problem with budgeting because they didn't know how much tax money they would get. They didn't know how much to expect in taxes because they didn't know what property is taxable or who owns it.

In 1940, a Fascist dictatorship took control of the country, electing the public local authorities and consulting the citizens in problems of local interest." It takes note of a number of laws that have been enacted to better define the various roles of government and other laws presently under consideration.

The "manifesto" advocates greater dialogue in workshops between participating countries. Also, teams of experts should be sent to assist the countries in the process of democratic reform. In particular, the experts should assist in establishing a legislative framework for local autonomy and formalized training for public service personnel.

Reality Check

"Members of the delegation advised me that this would be the only piece of paper in Romania with signatures on it from representatives from the Rumanian central government, the Parliament and the Rumanian forced its king to abdicate and allied Romania with Germany. The government confiscated much property. In 1944, the Russian army invaded Romania and shortly after that a communist government took control with the state nationalizing all industries and collectivizing the farms. In 1989, the communist regime headed by Nicolae Ceausescu was overthrown, with Ceausescu being killed. In 1990 a democratic government was established with the dominant political party consisting of officials of the former communist government. However, Hobbs said that the government does appear dedicated to democratizing and privatizing the country.

Who Owns What?

The taxing problem arises from the fact that at this time no one knows what property belongs to the central government, what belongs to the local government and what is privately owned. Hobbs reported. The "Krakow Manifesto" identifies seven problems, the first of which is the need to establish criteria to define property ownership and then assess the true value of property. This is needed to increase local property tax revenues and to establish collateral for bank loans.

Other problems the panel identified are the need to: improve the ability of government to establish and collect fines and penalties; establish criteria for the division of funds between central and local governments; define the structure for expenditures in local government budgets; plan budgets under inflationary conditions; obtain citizen input into the budget process; and define relationships between parliamentary committees, central government departments and other related social institutions.

The document states that "local public administration in Romania is based on the principle of local autonomy, on the principle of public services decentralmunicipalities," Hobbs reported. Since it was only a few years ago that Rumanian dissenters were jailed, tortured or disappeared, Hobbs took a "political reality check" with the participants. "Is there the possibility that anyone from the delegation will be jailed or worse as the result of our deliberations?" he asked. "I was laughingly reassured that such reprisals no longer took place in Romania."

Hobbs listed the key ingredients that enabled the successful development of the document. The eight-member Rumanian delegation was excited by the opportunity to discuss governmental change and reform. They represented the different levels of government and differing geographic areas. The American co-participants were eager to assist in any way possible. His role as moderator helped in that he asked the Rumanians to identify their priorities and their agenda and then insisted that the entire group work to serve the needs of the agenda. Another factor was the energy and commitment of an ICMA/Rumanian staff member who was pressed into double-duty as an interpreter.

Modern technology and the presence of a leading advocate for technology applications also significantly helped the process. Costis Toregas, the Executive Director of PTI was a participant. Toregas, who happens to know Rumanian, brought with him his laptop computer and printer. He was able to format the document in both languages in order to provide instant review by the participants. Even so, Hobbs noted that work on the document went from 4:30 a.m. of the second day to 3 a.m. the following morning.

Followup

Hobbs is anxious to learn what has occurred since the delegation returned to Romania. The mayor of Oradea, a municipality of about 250,000 had pledged to bring up the report at the September meeting of the Federation of Municipalities, an organization for which he serves on the Board of Directors. A representative of the Rumanian Parliament also promised to present the report to his committee in Parliament. Charles Andersen, former city manager of Dallas and Director of the Central and Eastern European Programs for ICMA was scheduled to visit Romania shortly following the conference.

Greenbelt Gifts

Hobbs distributed "Greenbelt is Great" T-shirts to the Rumanian delegation. "I said that the English translation meant 'Team Romania! Everyone agreed.'"

Recycling Tip

Plastic bags can be recycled at the local Co-op, Safeway and Giant supermarkets. Plastic bags can be clear or colored. Bags include dry cleaning bags, empty bread bags and any miscellaneous clean bags. Bags should be free of paper receipts and staples. Old bags are made into trash bags and plastic lumber. Recycling plastic bags is easy and important since they don't biodegrade in the landfill. Bags for recycling must be brought to a supermarket collection point. Bags are not accepted for recycling at the Drop-off Center. For more information about recycling, call 474-8308.

Wawel Castle, once the center of Polish government when Krakow was the capital, houses the remains of former kings and famous people, including those of Thaddeus Kosciuszko, Polish patriot and American Revolutionary War hero.

Uninsured Drivers Get Stiff Penalties

Many Maryland motorists, in spite of stepped up publicity, seem unaware that driving without auto insurance can result in heavy penalties. Marylanders pay $12 million yearly in fines for such practices.

The law requires all registered vehicles to be insured at all times at a minimum of $20,000/40,000 for bodily injury liability and $10,000 for property damage. Those in violation are penalized $150 per uninsured vehicle for the first 30 days, and beginning the 31st day, they are charged $7 for each additional day that each vehicle is uninsured. Moreover, MVA will not renew any registration nor issue a vehicle of an owner or co-owner who is named in an insurance violation.

"The bottom line is that motorists are to make sure their license plates are turned in to MVA and make sure they get a receipt for their plates on or before the day their insurance is no longer in force," says an MVA spokesperson.

Customers are advised to call 950-1MVA (950-1682) toll free from anywhere in Maryland, northern Virginia and Washington, D.C. to speak with an MVA representative regarding vehicle insurance questions or about any MVA transaction.

Hobbs Tells about Krakow And nearby Death Camps

by James Giese

When Greenbelt City Manager Daniel Hobbs attended the Conference on Municipal Finance and Budgeting in Krakow, Poland July 11 to 14, he was kept busy with the conference events and preparing the "Krakow Manifesto" (see separate story). However, he did arrive a few days early in order to adjust for jet lag and to have a little opportunity to see the city and two nearby concentration death camps.

Krakow Observations

"There is a profound need to whitewash or paint everything that doesn't move," Hobbs observed in describing Krakow. "There is a definite European charm hidden under the ever-pervasive gray grime on all buildings." The urban housing looks like American public housing projects, run down and grimy. Krakow was close to the largest steel mill in Europe, and there is much air pollution. The city is fortunate in that it was not heavily damaged by war—it was not fought over and the Nazis didn't have time to blow it up when the Russians captured it.

"It is easy to be critical," Hobbs observed, but he noted the long history of struggle and being subject to conquest in Poland. "I remind myself that the Polish people have been in the forefront of 20th century world democratization and have had to 'put it on the line' at great personal cost. . . . People may be poor and having a struggle, but this freedom thing is really significant."

Hobbs stayed at a new hotel built by Austrians. He likened its quality to that offered by a moderately priced motel chain although it is considered one of the better hotels in the city. While comfortable, the room was modest and austere, " . . . about the size of my college dormitory room, 28 years ago," he said.

One good thing about Krakow is that it has an area called a Belt of Green. The city was once surrounded by extensive fortifications. These have been torn down, leaving the ring of parkland now in its place.

Auschwitz-Birkenau

Hobbs had an opportunity to visit the death camps of Auschwitz and Birkenau. He was surprised to find that Auschwitz was quite small in size while Birkenau located nearby, covers a very large area. It took over an hour to reach these isolated areas on back roads.

Noting that it has been 55 years since these "killing camps" were closed, it is hard to get the full sense of what they were like when in use. Still, although he expected it to be a sobering, depressing experience, it went beyond that. "At times, it was overwhelming," he observed. The tour made it easier to understand the deceptions used by the Nazis to lure concentration camp victims to their deaths without causing panic. On the surface, Auschwitz must have looked to have been a fairly pleasant facility.

One of the most difficult moments on the tour for Hobbs was when he viewed a room containing tens of thousands of actual children's shoes remaining after their owners were exterminated. Another was seeing the underground torture cells. There was a strong sense of despair and claustrophobia there, forcing him to leave.

Treating Bee Stings

Every summer, over 25 million Americans are stung by insects. For many, a sting is nothing more than a painful nuisance, but for others, a sting can be life-threatening. To encourage a safe summer for everyone, the American College of Allergy and Immunology recommends the following three "A's" to manage insect stings.

Allergist: Consult an allergist regarding evaluation for preventive treatment. Future allergic reactions are preventable with a treatment known as venom immunotherapy. Anyone who has experienced an allergic reaction (hives, dizziness, nausea, difficulty in breathing, or unconsciousness) to an insect sting should be an allergist for evaluation.

Adrenaline: Carry self-injectable epinephrine. Individuals who are not candidates for immunotherapy should carry self-injectable epinephrine. This drug is useful in stopping an allergic reaction already in progress.

Avoidance: Practice insect avoidance. The risk of an insect sting can be minimized by avoiding the insects and their habitats. Yellowjackets live in the ground and inside walls. Hornets and wasps nest in bushes, trees and under the eaves of buildings. Use caution in these areas and never walk barefoot in the grass. Fragrances used in cosmetics and soaps can attract stinging insects, as can exposed food at picnics and open garbage areas, so be cautious.

For a free information brochure on allergic reactions to insect stings, call 1-800-23-STING.

County Exec. Race

dening to be the political leader of the county. Tignor has been endorsed by Miller. Curry is believed to represent the Glendening supporters although Glendening, who is running for Governor, has not endorsed any candidate. Polk and Mills have no ties to either faction.

Tignor appears to have the support of the largest number of office holders in the county, primarily from senators and delegates. She is slated with Senator Leo Green and the three delegates from the 23rd Legislative District, (the district that includes Greenbelt), in their bids for reelection. Wynn is also a strong supporter. County Councilmember Anne MacKinnon, originally a Castaldi supporter, has endorsed Tignor. Tignor is also considered to be the education candidate and has received much support from that community, including the endorsement of the county teacher's union.

Curry is supported by County Councilmember Hilda Pemberton, Steven DelGiudice and Jo Ann Bell. Before his untimely death, James Fletcher also had endorsed Curry. Glendening's Chief Administrative Officer, Major Rick Dick, is another Curry supporter. Because of his business and development connections, Curry is considered the candidate of business interests. He has also won the support of the county police and fire unions.

Mills, as an independent maverick, has received few political endorsements. After withdrawing from the executive race,

Richard Castaldi threw his support to Mills, citing her experience at a time when seven of the nine members of the county council would be newcomers. Mills, during her tenure, has emphasized constituent services and legislation on behalf of individuals and small businesses having special needs, and it is believed her strength comes from these sources. Because of her long time in office and her sharp-tongued retorts often quoted in the press, she appears to have the best name recognition in the county.

Race

The three candidates are generally treating the issue of race with care. With blacks holding a slight edge in the county's population, there is a desire by many that the next county executive be black. However, with three black candidates and only one white candidate, Mills may benefit from whatever division of votes may occur along racial lines. Curry has criticized Mills for her stance against school busing in the 70's and for other votes which he felt were against black interests. Mills responds that her positions were for reasons other than race and notes her strong popularity in a district she claims is 75% black.

Tignor has stated that race should not be a factor in choosing a county executive.

Crime

The three major candidates advocate more police on the streets and community policing. Mills would reassign officers doing administrative work. Tignor and Mills advocate boot camps for first-time nonviolent offenders. Curry and Tignor advocate building more recreation centers to provide youths with an alternative to crime, and Tignor would keep schools open longer for recreational use. Tignor advocates alternative schools for disruptive students, but Polk is opposed, believing that students assigned to the schools would be stigmatized for life. Mills wants the county to hire retired police officers to curb crime in schools. Polk advocates creating jobs for juveniles, as does Curry, who believes that inner-beltway revitalization is an important way to reduce crime. Curry wants the juvenile justice system overhauled and a second family crisis center built. The candidates are unclear how these programs would be funded except that some would seek additional state and federal grants.

Education

Only Mills is opposed to substantially increasing school funding. Mills considers it unrealistic to expect to find more funds available. Polk wants to fully fund school superintendent budgets. Tignor would like to spend half of the county's annual budget on schools by the end of the four-year term. To finance these increases she would reappropriate funds from other county services, allocate late property and income tax revenues to the school system, possibly impose impact fees on new developments and seek added funds from the state legislature. The other three candidates oppose development impact fees. Polk believes the school system needs to be re-engineered using a zero-based budgeting approach. Mills wants to end busing to achieve racial balance and use the funds saved for other educational purposes. She is willing to give the Board of Education its own power to levy taxes. Curry advocates a first class educational system for all, reduction of class sizes and enhanced neighborhood schools.

Community Development

Curry is expected to continue much of Glendening's economic development program, if elected. He supports revitalization efforts inside the beltway. While Mills also supports revitalization efforts for older commercial areas, she has been criticized by Curry for voting against a tax credit bill enacted last year by the County Council. Mills contends that the bill favored big business over small business.

Polk believes the executive needs to bring everyone together to devise a road map of where the county is going. He advocates a high performance task force with "Madison Avenue firms" involved to attract new business to the county. Tignor is a slow growth advocate but supports attracting high-tech and bio-tech industries and creating enterprise zones for minority contractors and small businesses. However, she does not want the older communities to become overdeveloped as a result of revitalization efforts.

Mills would consider eliminating the Economic Development Commission, which she believes is a haven for political cronies, and having the county executive responsible for promoting economic development. She also proposes eliminating the Maryland-National Capital Park and board president and a current board member.

None of the county executive candidates supports using county funds to lure Abe Pollin into building a new sports arena to replace the USAir Arena in Landover. Tignor is the only Democratic candidate supportive of Jack Kent Cook's efforts to build a stadium near Laurel.

Her contributions to the Museum remain one of her most enjoyable volunteer activities. She feels very happy about her accomplishments in helping to establish the Museum which she views as a very positive influence on present and future generations. "The Museum is a permanent benefit to the community," she proudly proclaims.

Mary joined the Cultural Arts Center shortly after it was founded in the early 1980s. She was a member of its board, and much of her volunteer hours were spent cleaning the theater after it had been closed for 10 years.

When Timer presented her with two complimentary tickets to a Cultural Arts Center production, it was the stipulation that she didn't have to clean or sell refreshments.

As a member of the St. Hugh's Ladies of Charity since 1980, Mary became a founding board member of the Interfaith Eviction Relief Fund to help the homeless and needy. She has served as president of the Ladies of Charity and is currently vice president of the Ladies of Charity of the Archdiocese.

Timer explained that "Her knowledge of the social services system and her rapport with professional social workers allows her to aid people in danger of being evicted or of losing their benefits. Many a landlord has received a call requesting that an eviction be delayed while she 'twists some arms' to get the needed funds."

Mary acknowledges that she enjoys networking, and knows how to lean on people to get money. "Everybody has food, but rent is very different—and it is ongoing." Among the homeless projects she has worked on are SOME (So Others Can Eat), Safe Havens and Warm Nights, and the establishment of transitional housing for homeless families.

"Sometimes it is a little depressing," she states, "because you know you are just buying the family a little time. You don't really change their lives that much." But, she perseveres because she is committed to trying to make a difference.

Having recently celebrated her 75th birthday, Mary was described by one nominator as someone "with tireless strength, boundless energy, unfailing good humor and limitless caring..." Among the gifts she received from the Festival Committee was one of the historical afghans created by Nancy DePlatchett depicting Greenbelt scenes.

She was joined on stage by several of her children and many of her grandchildren, all of whom delighted in the public recognition of her many achievements. Having handed the bouquet of flowers she received to her granddaughter Rachel, Mary jubilantly recalls seeing Rachel bowing and smiling just as if she had been honored instead of her grandmother.

Extraterrestrial Report

intercepted by David Morse
TO: Central Command
FROM: Ziklfgg'n-Dingdang
The following is my report as to why I was late returning to base.

My zzlerpniks failed and I was forced to land on some backwater planet in Sector 432. Well, you know how hard it is to find a good mechanic, so I kept my eyes peeled (two of them, while the other three caught some z's). Using my scanners, I thought I spotted an open-air launch station.

Numerous inhabitants lined up with tickets waiting to enter a number of machines which I took to be interstellar vehicles, several of which looked like older-model short-hop shuttles. One, labeled the "Gravirton," looked especially promising. So I set down there.

But they weren't vehicles at all. The machines are used for no discernible purpose. Or at least none that I could fathom.

Apparently, they just stand there and go round and round, turning the occupants upside down and flinging them about. It seems like a painful experience. The screaming is something awful to hear.

I tried one of them, just to be sure I wasn't misunderstanding something. I got so dizzy I nearly bluffed my blerddneg.

The machines were set up temporarily for an event known as a "Labor Day." Perhaps it's a fertility rite symbolizing birth pangs. Some form of penance seems involved.

In any case, I recorded some observations (see attachment), which you can forward to the Ministry of Strange and Deviant Subcultures, if they're interested.

Another noteworthy feature of this place: While not particularly rational, the inhabitants, who are just about our size, are quite friendly, and are surpassing generosity. At all times, they accompany themselves with surly creatures nearly twice their size who they apparently keep as pets, despite their penchant for ill-tempered barking.

Their pets have some surface similarities in appearance, so they may be a related species further down the evolutionary scale.

I never did locate a competent mechanic, but — since I obvi-

Proclamation

WHEREAS, rarely is a city as fortunate as ours wherein resides a mother of nine, grandmother of nineteen, someone who could already rest on her laurels with a life of hard work and constant contribution to the welfare of others but instead took onto herself the impossible labor of love — helping the homeless:

WHEREAS, Mary Linstrom nine years ago began work on the Greenbelt Museum, became a member of the Board of Directors, and later served as Vice President, then President from 1987 to 1992 with great popularity and success, doing this yeoman job with incredible ease and the wisdom of graceful age and agelessness;

WHEREAS, Mary Linstrom, without a budget or previous structure, did develop a system to work with the homeless, and those about to be homeless, to prevent eviction and strive to bring society's victims out of crisis;

WHEREAS, Mary Linstrom, along with her varied charity work, cooked, counseled, collected, cajoled and cheered Families-at-Risk, that others might be reluctant to acknowledge;

NOW THEREFORE, I, Antoinette M. Bram, by the authority vested in me by the City Council and the citizens of Greenbelt, hereby issue this proclamation in honor of

to recognize her as exemplifying those qualities that continue to make Greenbelt an excellent place in which to live and as such, truly deserving of this honor.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the City of Greenbelt, Md. to be affixed this 2nd day of September, 1994.

Recycle Cardboard

Cardboard is recyclable. Paperboard and paper egg cartons, too. Residents are invited to recycle these materials at the Drop-Off Center near the "Buddy" Attick Lake Park. Be sure boxes are empty and flattened (to conserve space). Occasionally, the first door is locked to encourage residents to drop material into the middle or end of the container. This helps even the spread of cardboard. Plastic coated cartons and boxes (generally stored in the refrigerator and freezer) are not acceptable because of their coating. Pizza boxes are not welcomed because of the grease. In 1993, Greenbelt residents recycled over 70,000 lbs., an increase of 42 percent over last year. For more information about recycling call 474-8308.

Learn to Landscape With Native Plants

On Thursday, September 15 at 10:30 the U.S. National Arboretum is presenting an illustrated lecture by Carole Ottenson, author of Ornamental Grasses - the Amber Wave. Ottenson will discuss how to use lesser known but highly functional native trees, shrubs and herbaceous plants as an alternative to commonly used standard landscape plants. Come to the Administration Bldg. classroom.

The Arboretum is located at 3501 New York Avenue, N.E. Washington, DC 20002. For general information call 202-245-2726.

Sarbanes, Hoyer Discuss Plans for Research Center

by Jennifer Castelli

Senator Paul Sarbanes, and Representative Steny Hoyer told the Greenbelt City Council on August 8 that some development on the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) site will protect Maryland from losing the "world's premiere agricultural lab." "We fought very hard in the 1980's to keep BARC from being sold off," the Senator said at a special work session held before the evening's regular council meeting.

Sarbanes said, that the occasional use of BARC for other purposes will help appease other states who would like to see the research center in their backyards. However city council members expressed concerns about development on the land. "We want to preserve the BARC because it represents the northern flank of Greenbelt," said Councilmember Thomas X. White. Councilmember Edward Putens agreed and said many citizens who live in Greenbelt are getting scared of too much development.

But Sarbanes said that BARC has begun the development of a master plan to chart out the land's future. The Greenbelt City Council should work closely with BARC on the development of the plan, he advised.

Also, Hoyer said that a Department of Agriculture building planned for the site is going to be smaller than rumored. The building will house only 1,500 employees, half as many as once speculated he told the council.

The council members also asked Sarbanes and Hoyer to help keep Soil Conservation Road open. Currently, NASA is considering closing the road or making it accessible to their employees only. "We don't have any more room for cars in this area," said Mayor Antoinette Bram.

Hoyer said he was aware of the proposal to shut down the road and he would look into the matter.

Chevy's to Open by March

by Diane Oberg

The members of the Greenbelt City Council were generally pleased at the August 22 worksession when plans for the new Chevy's restaurant in Greenway Center were presented. The restaurant is expected to open by March 1 at the previous Kangaroo Katie's location. The Chevy's Restaurant will replace the All in One restaurant Pepsi Co. had previously proposed for the site.

The new restaurant will be part of a chain of sit-down restaurants run by Taco Bell, a subsidiary of PepsiCo. The company has purchased the property and reached an agreement with the owners of Greenway Center, which now supports the new restaurant. The two parties have agreed to covenants that will prohibit the construction of a larger building on the site and ban fast food restaurants or drive through windows on the property.

Bill Monk, a planning/zoning consultant working for PepsiCo, told council that the Chevy's restaurant chain began in San Francisco and was purchased about two years ago by PepsiCo. There are currently about 50 Chevy's restaurants, 40 of which are in California. Monk described the operation as a "restaurant/restaurant" not a bar/restaurant. The restaurant will have a single bar, which will close at 10:30 on weekdays, 11:30 on weekends. For contrast, he brought council the sign from Kangaroo Katie's showing bar closing times of 1:30 and 2:30.

Chevy's will be a family-oriented restaurant, Monk said, displaying his "official Chevy's crayons" as proof. The food will be prepared fresh, with olive oil being the only canned food used. The company will upgrade the exterior of the building and the landscaping and will spend more than 1 million on interior renovations, he said.

Council raised no objections to the plans as explained by Monk. With completion of the property purchase, the company needs no formal action by city council or county officials to proceed with its plans, according to city Director of Planning and Community Development Celia Wilson.

Primary Election

Governor

Prince Georges County Executive since 1982, Glendening's major Democratic challengers in the gubernatorial contest are the teams of State Senator American Joe Miedusiewski/Bernie Fowler, State Senator Mary H. Boergers/Barbara Kreamer and Lt. Governor Melvin A. Steinberg/James C. Simpson. Miedusiewski is a resident of Baltimore City; Boergers, Montgomery County and Steinberg, Baltimore County. Others running are the teams of Don Allensworth/Linda K. Hartman, Lawrence K. Freeman/Mark S. Nafziger and Walter Gilchrist Finch/John F. Siegert.

Until recently U. S. Representative Helen Delich Bentley, a Republican of Baltimore County, and her Lieutenant Governor choice, State Senator Howard A. Denis had a commanding lead over her challengers in the Republican primary. Working hard and closing the gap is Maryland Delegate and House of Delegates minority leader from Baltimore County, Ellen R. Sauerbrey, who tapped Paul Rappaport as her Lieutenant Governor. Trying again to be his party's nominee is William S. Shephard of Montgomery County. A career diplomat, he is running with Julie Walsh Gouge.

State Representatives

The incumbent 23rd Legislative District members, all Democrats and Bowie residents are running for reelection. State Senator Leo Green has no opposition in the primary or the general election. Incumbent Delegates Joan Pitkin, Mary Conroy and James Hubbard are being challenged by Mark A. Piccirilli of Glenn Dale, Jason Jennings of Seabrook and Robert J. Schelin of Bowie. A former Greenbelter, Piccirilli appears to be running a strong campaign.

Republicans running unopposed for the three House of Delegates seats are Theodore W. Henderson of Greenbelt Road, D. Alfred Schauer of Bowie and Paul Tucker of Upper Marlboro. In the 23rd Legislative District there are 33,713 Democrats and 15,645 Republicans registered as of August 15.

State Comptroller

Veteran Democratic office holder Louis L. Goldstein of Calvert County, has no thought of retiring. Maryland's Comptroller since 1959, he has held various state offices since 1938. His challenger is James B. Moorhead of Montgomery County. An attorney, for nine years, three as a federal prosecutor in Baltimore, Moorhead recently completed two years service on the Governor's Commission on Efficiency and Economy in Government.

On the Republican side, Timothy R. Mayberry of Washington County emphasizes his 15 year experience as a career banking executive. Attorney Richard Taylor of Montgomery County, a partner with the Steptoe & Johnson law firm since 1962, has been a Republican National Committeemember for Maryland since 1962.

Attorney General

Incumbent Democrat J. Joseph Curran, Jr. wants to retain his job as Attorney General. In a face-off again with attorney Eleanor M. Carey, he also is being challenged by attorney Patrick J. Smith. In responding to the League of Women Voters question dealing with gun control, Curran and Carey were supportive of licensing and registration of guns. Smith calls for enforcement of existing law - not more gun control laws.

Unopposed, Republican Richard D. Bennett, former federal prosecutor and U. S. Attorney for Maryland, will be his party's nominee for Attorney General in November.

State's Attorney

A crowded field of Democratic candidates for the Office of State's Attorney is vying for the opportunity to replace Alex Williams, now a federal judge. Throwing his hat in the ring is Greenbelter Dwight Jackson of Ora Glen Court, an assistant states attorney in Upper Marlboro. Other hopefuls in this hot contest are former State's Attorney Arthur A. Bud Marshall, Thomas R. Hendershot, Russell P. Butler, Jacqueline P. Byrd-Tillman, Jack B. Johnson, Deputy State's Attorney, Rosalyn Pugh and Benjamin Wolman.

In 1986 Marshall was defeated by Alex Williams in a bitter primary faceoff. Marshall then endorsed the Republican candidate. When he later changed his party affiliation to Republican, he challenged Williams in 1990 and lost. Marshall is now running as a Democrat.

Hendershot has served on the Prince Georges County Board of Education from 1984 to the present; two years as chairman. Wolman represents many county and State Fraternal Order of Police organizations, including Greenbelt's F.O.P.

No Republican filed for the Office of State's Attorney.

County Offices

Incumbent James V. Aluisi faces one challenger, Reginald N. Riley, for the Democratic nomination for county sheriff. Aluisi has had a total of 28 years of experience in the Office of Sheriff. Riley, a 21 year veteran of the Prince Georges County Police Department, held the rank of Captain and Assistant Commander of District I.

No Republicans are running for the office of sheriff.

For the Democratic nomination for Clerk of the Circuit Court, incumbent Vivian Jenkins is unopposed. M. Patricia Thompson is the lone Republican hopeful.

Incumbent Callie Mae Heffron has no challengers in the Democratic nomination for Register of Wills. On the Republican side, Everett L. Edmond is running unopposed.

Democratic candidates for the three Judges of the Orphan's Court slots are incumbents Angelo I. Castelli, Albert W. Northrop and Lucy B. Warr and challenger Dee Francis Alban. In November the winners will face Republicans Roger C. Ault, Bonnie L. Austin, and Roberta Buell Deegan.

In the non-partisan elections, 10 candidates are seeking election to the six Circuit Court Judgeships in District 7. Sitting judges are Vincent J. Femia, Robert H. Mason, C. Phillip Nichols, Jr., William B. Spellbring, Jr. Robert J. Woods and Sylvia W. Woods, Sr. Challengers are Charles J. Janus, Jo Ann Myles and Elvira Marie White.

Central Committee Races

Greenbelters will vote for two candidates for the Democratic Central Committee from the 23rd legislative district. Greenbelt City Council member Thomas X. White who currently serves on the central committee is running for reelection. Incumbent Donald G. Beach, Steven T. Cain, Greenbelter Hans-Egon Hopp and Charles J. Ryan III are also on the ballot.

Greenbelt Democratic voters will also vote for one at-large central committee member from each of the other legislative districts (except District 26 where there is no contest). At large candidates from those districts are 21st district - Daniel J. Andrews, Reginald F. Berry, Ronald A. Finiani and James A. Wiggins; 22nd - Edilberto M. Atienza and Sarah C. Potter; 23rd - Virginia C. Burnette, Lawrence E. Keval and Daniel S. Ricker; 24th - Beverly B. Anthony and Mary R. Davis; 25th - Rosie A. Cobb and Horace J. Hillsman.

Republican voters will vote for two candidates for the Republican Central Committee from the 23rd district. Vying for the two slots are Carl W. Burbank, Evelyn B. diStefano, Kathryn Kelly Kout and William J. Wyatt, Jr. There are no at-large candidates for the Republican central committee.

Incumbent school board member Suzanne Plogman of Greenbelt is unopposed in the primary and general election for the non-partisan District 2 Board of Education seat. Her name will not appear on the primary ballot.

enfeld has spent much of his time in other areas of the district where he is not so well known. Robinson, recognizing the former mayor's general popularity in Greenbelt, has made little effort to gain votes here. Callahan has been working all parts of the district, but has received little recognition in this city.

As with other local elections, the principal issues are based upon voter concerns about crime, education and community development.

Crime

Robinson, calling crime his number one priority, advocates increasing the size of the county police force by 200 officers. He supports merging the county police with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission's Park Police Department. Weidenfeld also proposes increases, particularly in the number of officers in the community-oriented policing program. He also wishes to promote more community involvement. Callahan calls for adequate funding and staffing for public safety agencies and more police officers. No information is available on how the costs for these added employees will be funded.

Education

All candidates support neighborhood schools and the end to court imposed busing to provide for racial diversity in the schools. All three advocate greater communication between the county council and the school board. Weidenfeld seeks smaller class sizes, greater security and superior instructional material plus greater citizen involvement to tutor students and assist teachers. He says that funding can be obtained by cutting other county programs and by seeking added state aid and increasing the county's tax base. Callahan and Robinson want to review the school budget before supporting any funding increases. Callahan would support funding to reduce class size and curb violence within schools.

Community Development

Robinson has publicly charged that Weidenfeld supports the Intercounty Connector, which Robinson opposes. However, Weidenfeld and the Greenbelt City Council have consistently opposed construction of that proposed road in Prince Georges County.

Weidenfeld calls for a science and technology summit to form a task force and develop strategy to recruit more high-tech companies to the county to expand the tax base and provide better-paying jobs. The University of Maryland Science and Technology Center is the targeted area in which to attract these new businesses. Robinson also seeks high-tech and other desirable development and will work to reduce the duplication in the development review process.

Callahan supports putting some controversial zoning decisions before the voters. Weidenfeld supports supermajority votes of the county council on zoning decisions that contradict the area master plan. He will adhere to strict interpretation of master plans and insist on quality development. Robinson believes that there should be some at-large council representation to make the council responsible to everyone in the county.

Recycling Corner

Throwing away a good thing? People might be if they are bagging their grass. Consider "grasscycling"—mulching the clippings back into the lawn. Grasscycling will hydrate a lawn and return valuable nutrients back into the lawn. A single ton of freshly mowed grass contains 50 lbs of nitrogen, 18 lbs of phosphorous and over 45 lbs. of potassium, which can be returned to the soil and contribute to a lush, healthy lawn. Grasscycling will speed up the time required to mow the lawn, too. Don't bag and drag the grass! For a free brochure about grass cycling or backyard composting, call the City Recycling Coordinator at 474-8308.
